

Press release - March 2006

Pascal Debon, Former President of Nortel Networks' Carrier Networks and Global Operations, Puts a Lot Into Checkphone.

In addition to serving on the Board of Directors, Debon is chairing and establishing a Supervisory Board for the IP telephony security specialist

After having worked over more than thirty years for telecommunications equipment manufacturers, Pascal Debon has decided to use his experience to benefit this young company with a promising future. In late 2005, the US-based Debon, 59, left Nortel Networks, where he had served as President of the company's Wireless Networks division before becoming President of its Carrier and Global Operations division.

"Now that IP telephony is a reality, telephone applications security has become a major challenge for the coming years. Today few players are dealing with these issues. The technology and positioning being offered by Checkphone with its ETSS (Expert Telecom Security System) software suite won me over, and I've noticed the same enthusiasm coming from carriers, equipment manufacturers, and leading businesses. Checkphone software solutions will soon be key components of every IP telephony migration project," said Debon.

Thus, while serving on the firm's Board of Directors, Debon has also become the Chairman of this European IP telephony security specialist's Supervisory Board. As such, his role will initially be to form the Supervisory Board that will be best able to advise Checkphone regarding its strategic directions.

Debon launched his career at Alcatel in 1975. After spending 15 years there, he joined Nortel Networks in 1990, where he primarily served as President of GSM Networks, President of EMEA, and President of the Wireless division before becoming President of the company's Carrier Networks and Global Operations division. This entity, which resulted from the merger of the fixed, wireless and optical telephony business units, represented most of the Canadian equipment manufacturers' global operations.

About Checkphone - www.checkphone.com:

Checkphone was founded in February 2005 by three associates, all of whom had significant experience in telecommunications. Checkphone is currently the leading specialist in IP telephony and corporate telephony security. Using its ETSS (Expert Telecom Security System) software suite, Checkphone makes businesses' telephone applications secure and allows them to enjoy the many benefits of VoIP with complete peace of mind, without challenging the security of their information systems.

CheckPhone solutions are intended for major companies, management divisions, carriers, and telecommunications equipment manufacturers, and have been developed in collaboration with leading telecommunications equipment manufacturers (AASTRA, ALCATEL, SIEMENS, etc.).

This company, which has already earned top references in France, plans to expand its operations throughout Europe and is working towards opening an office in the USA.
